The Berkeley candidates

Mrs. Mitchell has only one candidate, and that is McCord—and that is a very serious thing.

As a result, Ulrich will be running...
CANDIDATE

(Continued From Page 1)

basic tools with which to survive in the world.

Roh has underscored his philosophy in the voter handbook statement that “Berkeley must provide options for all children so that creativity is not inhibited, nor basic skills diluted. I know that within the Asian community, the educational system has failed in spite of the stereotype of academic achievements by Asians.

“I SENSE the pulse of the black and Chicano communities and feel the urgency to commit myself to children learning. Therefore I dedicate myself to an educational system that enhances the dignity and respect of all.”

Quality education must be diversified and “not produce an intellectual elite,” he added.

On the simmering issue of violence in the schools, the Oakland-born, University of California-educated candidate believes the administration and board “have abdicated their responsibility to provide an atmosphere and climate where students can feel positively supported and safe.”

“THERE IS a lack of trust between citizens and the board and people are up-in-arms on every kind of behavior issue that comes up. We need teachers to become much more involved with students so they would not be frightened by them.”

Supervision and control in the classroom must be maintained so that teachers and students can respect each other. Roh added.

The young candidate said he believes that the answer to serious behavior problems with students is not so much their suspension from school but their suspension from class so they can stay in school and work in programs and projects aimed at removing the causes of their behavior.

ROH SAID he is in favor of “preventative” kinds of programs relying on community expertise to serve as a “buffer” between the school and society at large in dealing with problem students.

“I would have a probation officer close at hand — in a consultative, not an oppressive, setting — to handle these kinds of situations” before recourse to police, Juvenile authorities and the courts is attempted, he said.

Roh said he favors “incentive salaries” so that classroom teachers who are committed to teaching could remain in the classroom and not be penalized for turning down a promotion that could put them into the administration — hence there could be some parity between administrators and teachers.

ROH GRADUATED from the University of California where he studied criminology and added a Master’s in educational psychology. He has taught in the San Francisco Public Schools and added a Master’s in educational psychology.

ROH GRADUATED from the University of California where he studied criminology and added a Master’s in educational psychology. He has taught in the San Francisco Public Schools.

Heroin the top consumer import

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A San Francisco Superior Court judge said heroin is the top consumer import in the United States with nearly 14,000 tons being smuggled into the country each year.

The judge’s statements came in response to a petition by the federal government seeking additional Customs and Border Protection agents to combat drug trafficking.

He estimated costs of $35 to $40 million if Berkeley failed to have a buffer to delay. He did not predict the cost of delay, but said it would be substantial.

He expressed concern about the potential for a delay in Berkeley, which has been described as a “buffer” between the school and society at large in dealing with problem students.

The Berkeley Daily Gazette

HE DISMISSED all of RIOT’s claims for short-term profits accruing from a city takeover by noting the report’s finding that “it is not likely that significant benefits, such as lowering of electric rates or reducing taxes, could be accomplished within the first 10 years after Berkeley starts operating its own electric system.”

HARRIS contrasted RIOT’s concerns about the potential for a delay in Berkeley with the.booming market for public-power and non-power groups. He said the state’s special prosecutor’s office said Friday that Berkeley’s claims for short-term profits were not supported.

He placed Berkeley’s claims for short-term profits in the context of the potential for a delay in Berkeley’s plans to operate its own electric system. Berkeley has been described as a “buffer” between the school and society at large in dealing with problem students.

PG&E ISSUE

(Continued From Page 1)

HARRIS estimated costs of $35 to $40 million if Berkeley failed to have a buffer to delay. He did not predict the cost of delay, but said it would be substantial.

He expressed concern about the potential for a delay in Berkeley, which has been described as a “buffer” between the school and society at large in dealing with problem students.

The Berkeley Daily Gazette

HE DISMISSED all of RIOT’s claims for short-term profits accruing from a city takeover by noting the report’s finding that “it is not likely that significant benefits, such as lowering of electric rates or reducing taxes, could be accomplished within the first 10 years after Berkeley starts operating its own electric system.”

HARRIS contrasted RIOT’s concerns about the potential for a delay in Berkeley with the booming market for public-power and non-power groups. He said the state’s special prosecutor’s office said Friday that Berkeley’s claims for short-term profits were not supported.

He placed Berkeley’s claims for short-term profits in the context of the potential for a delay in Berkeley’s plans to operate its own electric system. Berkeley has been described as a “buffer” between the school and society at large in dealing with problem students.

PG&E ISSUE

(Continued From Page 1)

HARRIS contrasted RIOT’s claims for short-term profits accruing from a city takeover by noting the report’s finding that “it is not likely that significant benefits, such as lowering of electric rates or reducing taxes, could be accomplished within the first 10 years after Berkeley starts operating its own electric system.”

HARRIS estimated costs of $35 to $40 million if Berkeley failed to have a buffer to delay. He did not predict the cost of delay, but said it would be substantial.

He expressed concern about the potential for a delay in Berkeley, which has been described as a “buffer” between the school and society at large in dealing with problem students.

The Berkeley Daily Gazette

HE DISMISSED all of RIOT’s claims for short-term profits accruing from a city takeover by noting the report’s finding that “it is not likely that significant benefits, such as lowering of electric rates or reducing taxes, could be accomplished within the first 10 years after Berkeley starts operating its own electric system.”

HARRIS contrasted RIOT’s concerns about the potential for a delay in Berkeley with the booming market for public-power and non-power groups. He said the state’s special prosecutor’s office said Friday that Berkeley’s claims for short-term profits were not supported.

He placed Berkeley’s claims for short-term profits in the context of the potential for a delay in Berkeley’s plans to operate its own electric system. Berkeley has been described as a “buffer” between the school and society at large in dealing with problem students.