School Labor Agreement to Wait for Election

RENT BOARD PICKS MILLIART

10 for Copy—$2.75 per month

MISSISSIPPI FLOODS?

RENTER'S CATALOG, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4, 1977

37

Caretaking Daily Gazette
SCHOOL BOARD

(Continued From Page 1)

A list of programs which are having positive results with black students.

- A board policy of not funding programs which do not have a firm commitment from the proposals of the group's proposals.

HARRIETT G. JENKINS, assistant superintendent in charge of instruction, will respond to the demands April 18.

The board last night also gave firm support of the Experimental Schools Program (ESP), and the go-ahead for a rewrite of the massive document which outlines the program next year.

The board's endorsement was asked by federal authorities, according to program director, Barry Wells.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

This resolution asks that funds be continued through the 1972-73 school year.

RAFFLE

(Continued From Page 1)

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

ACCINELLI said that drive was "very similar" to the present effort.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.

The board also passed a resolution backing the state ESEA Title I program, which is designed to provide educational opportunities for children from low-income families.

The demands, as announced by James Miller, are:

- A list of principals, administrators and teachers who support the group's proposal and a list of those who do not.

One of the judges.

Author, poet and teacher Max Durham, Rogers.