

In an advanced summer class, students teamed up with design consultants to provide services to local groups, such as this community task force that was planning for a senior center in Oakland. The clients' eagerness to meet federal and state guidelines for accessibility provided a powerful source of validation for the consultants' role.